

WHAT QANTAS HAS BEEN SAYING

ABOUT YOUR JOB SECURITY

Despite record profits Qantas does not think your job security is important! They have confirmed:

▶ THEY WILL REDUCE STAFFING LEVELS

“Qantas announced a raft of cost-cutting measures in response to rising fuel costs, which included reductions in domestic and international capacity, retirement of aircraft, reduction of management position and ongoing fuel surcharges.”

▶ THEY ARE TRAINING STRIKE BREAKERS OVERSEAS

“Qantas has taken a pre-empting industrial action against its staff, by sending managers to Los Angeles for ground operations training. The airline claimed it to be ‘a contingency measure, to ensure flights can continue as normal if ground staff strike’.”

▶ THEY DO NOT BELIEVE YOUR JOB SECURITY SHOULD BE PART OF ANY EBA NEGOTIATIONS

“Allan Joyce said the proposed clause which incorporated ‘job security’ would be ‘hugely detrimental’ to the commercial operations, and ‘If a job security clause is a mechanism for a veto on change then, yes, we cannot agree’.”

EXPANDING FLEETS

Qantas said the group will purchase 10 new planes and lease a further 18 aircraft by the end of 2012/13 to support expansion and growth "With the domestic market continuing its strong post-recovery and growth, the Qantas group will need additional capacity to participate in this growth and maintain its profit maximising 65 per cent market share."

STRONG CAPACITY GROWTH

In the March Qantas staff newsletter, Alan Joyce congratulated staff for its return, while stating that "the Group also expects to increase international capacity in the second half of this year by 7%, and 8% in domestic ... I would like to thank all employees who contributed to these results. Your performance over the last six years ... was exceptional."

WELL HEDGED AGAINST OIL SPIKES

"In conjunction with the RBS global airline report, 'Pain at the Pump', we conclude that Qantas is one of the most protected airlines globally from further oil price spikes, with material short-term hedging in place. With Qantas trading well below 1.0x P/B we maintain our Buy recommendation."
