

Foodora riders you may be owed money! Meeting 9am on Friday November 16th

Foodora: what's happening

Foodora's administrators last week agreed that the company would pay some money towards riders because they have been underpaid wages and not paid superannuation for years.

This means anyone who has worked as a rider for Foodora may get money back.

Next steps

A meeting will be held on Friday November 16th so creditors can decide to whether to accept the company's offer. If you were a rider at Foodora you are a creditor and you can vote on the day.

The meeting on November 16th

Suite 1, Level 15, 9 Castlereigh Street, Sydney

At 9am the TWU will meet riders in the café downstairs at 9am to talk through the process.

At 9.30am Foodora's administrators will answer any of your questions.

At 11am you will get the chance to vote.

If you don't want to come to the meeting but want your voice heard you can appoint someone from the TWU to be your proxy at the meeting. See overleaf for how to do this.

If you come to the meeting and want to vote, you have three options:

- Vote to accept the company's offer

The first option is to accept the company's offer - the Deed of Company Arrangement or DOCA. We think this is the best option.

The DOCA provides that the parent company for foodora, Delivery Hero, will give $3 million to the administrators Worrells to distribute money owed to creditors of the company like you. If the DOCA is accepted, all riders of the company will need to lodge certain documents including a proof of debt.

With this option, all riders, including visa holders, can claim money.

- Vote to wind up Foodora and liquidate it

If Foodora went into liquidation and were to wind up its affairs there would be a lot less money available than would be under the DOCA.

Riders who are Australian citizens or permanent residents are eligible to claim back some monies for the 13 weeks before the company went into administration under the Fair Entitlements Guarantee through the Australian Government.

- Administration Ends and Foodora takes back control of the Company

In this scenario, foodora would take back control of the company after the administration. If this happens there will be no DOCA, liquidation or other process in place for payments owed to creditors.
