

Aerocare aviation workers are forced to sleep rough next to baggage carousels

THIRD WORLD CONDITIONS EXPOSED AT AUSTRALIA'S AIRPORTS

Behind the shiny façade of Australia's world class airports is an underclass of aviation workers, struggling to make ends meet.

Aviation workers are forced onto insecure, part-time work, which involves early morning and late evening split shifts. The pay and hours are so bad that workers are forced to sleep at the airport. Many of these workers live below the poverty line.

Airlines and airports earn billion-dollar profits and should ensure all contractors operating on their behalf are paying and treating their workers fairly.

SAFE & SECURE AUSTRALIAN SKIES

Sign the petition here <http://bit.ly/2nyLv60>
to tell airports and airlines that aviation workers deserve a living wage and acceptable conditions.

The Transport Workers' Union will continue to fight for aviation workers.