

UPDATE - QANTAS COMPENSATION

Firstly, thanks to every affected Qantas worker on your patience as we draw closer to commencing the final process to ensure you receive your compensation.

WHAT'S HAPPENING NOW

After further delay tactics from Qantas, we are close to moving to the next stage in this process and securing an initial payment to all affected Qantas workers.

- Terms for a deed are close to finalised
- We are now finalising a court process before we move to the next stage and this will include giving every affected worker the opportunity to provide their own information
- Given the complexity of this case and the number of workers affected, it has taken some time to work through a process that will be fair and efficient going forward

NEXT STEPS

When the deed is finalised, we will have further updates on how the initial payments will work, and the process for payments over and above that amount.

You will soon receive correspondence from Maurice Blackburn which will administrate the compensation process. This will include a request for information from affected workers.

Compensation will proceed in accordance with the judge's decision on the test cases, which we are bound by, and every affected worker will receive the compensation you are entitled to by applying the principles determined in the judgment.

FAQ ON PROCESS

We know that many of you have questions around the timeline and how the compensation process will work.

We will soon send an explanation of what the next steps will be.

After a long court battle with Qantas fighting every step of the way to deny workers compensation, we are so close to workers finally seeing some relief.
